

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method of preparing organometal compounds that does not use oxygenated solvents is provided. The compounds produced by such method are particularly useful as precursor compounds for metalorganic chemical vapor deposition processes used in the manufacture of electronic devices. Methods of depositing metal films using such organometal compounds are also provided.